Strengthening the Heart of Adventist Theology

Global Reach

The Adventist Theological Society is an international society of Seventh-day Adventist Scholars who provide a faith-affirming theological resource for the Seventh-day Adventist Church. The Society regularly touches Adventist leaders, pastors, theologians, and lay people with the inspiration, power and depth of God's Word.

The resources of ATS are freely available to the world field, as Church leadership and seminaries requests theological assistance, training for workers, Bible symposia and camp meeting speakers. The Society welcomes the expertise of its professional members and invites them to participate in this global resource.

ATS fosters biblical, theological, and historical studies, which strengthen the Seventh-day Adventist Church's message and mission. It accepts the fundamental beliefs of the Seventh-day Adventist Church as its theological position and adheres to the Church's voted "Methods of Bible Study" as its hermeneutical position.

Vision

- Promotes sound biblical scholarship
- Creates a spiritual and intellectual atmosphere for fellowship and dialogue
- Provides opportunities for the dissemination of scholarly thought
- Sponsors Bible conferences, symposia and conventions
- Publishes theological literature
- Offers web-based theological resources
- Connects with both scholars and lay people
- Advances the fundamental beliefs of Seventh-day Adventists

Online Resource

www.atasjats.org offers Society members and guests both information and theological resource.

JATS and PD can be read, researched and downloaded, always available on the go.

Podcasts of Society Bible symposia and other professional meetings are available as MP3 audio files either from the ATS website or iTunes. Individuals who missed or could not attend a special event can still hear yet unpublished papers.

Membership

Take part in the inspiration. The learning. The influence. The faith-affirming resource. Publish your paper in JATS or PD. Sponsor an international venture or finance the publication (or translation) of an important theological work. Become an ATS member. Visit us online (www.atsjats.org) and learn how you can share the ATS experience.

Publications

ATS influences thought and engages in theological dialogue through its numerous publications:

Journal of the Adventist Theological Society (JATS) is a refereed scholarly journal which regularly brings solid Adventist scholarship to libraries and theologians both within the Adventist community and among non-Adventist Evangelical scholars.

Perspective Digest (PD) is a readable online-journal digest of theological thought allowing the Adventist scholar's influence to reach beyond academia to busy pastors and interested lay people.

A series of monographs, occasional papers, festschrifts and dissertations further comprise the Society's publication portfolio.

The Adventist Theological Society is a dynamic scholarly resource dedicated to advancing the fundamental beliefs of Seventh-day Adventists and strengthening the heart of Adventist theology.
